Admiral Jellicoe, commander of the British Grand Fleet, has reported to the Admiralty that the British cruiser Hampshire, with Earl Kitchener and his staff aboard, has been lost off the West Orkneys.

Four boats were seen to leave the Hampshire, but a heavy sea was running. Only a capsized boat and some bodies have been found. Earl Kitchener was on his way to Russia. Admiral Jellicoe's reports there is little hope that there were any survivors.

Admiral Jellicoe's report to the admiralty is as follows: "I have to report with deep regret that His Majesty's ship Hampshire, Captain Herbert J. Savill, R.N., with Lord Kitchener and his staff on board, was sunk last night at about 8 p.m. to the west of the Orkneys, either by a mine or a torpedo."

"Four boats were seen by observers on shore to leave the ship. The wind was north-northeast, and heavy seas were running. Patrol vessels and destroyers at once proceeded to the spot, and a party was sent along the coast to search, but only some bodies and a capsized boat have been found up to the present. As the whole shore has been searched from the seaward, I greatly fear that there is little hope of there being any survivors."

"No report has yet been received from the search party on shore."

"H. M. S. Hampshire was on her way to Russia."

Accompanying Earl Kitchener as his staff were Hugh James O'Brien, former councillor of the British embassy at Petrograd and former minister at Sofia; O. A. Fitzgerald, Earl Kitchener's private military secretary; Brig. General Ellershaw, and Sir Frederick Donaldson.

Sir William Robertson, who already had taken over the war secretary's duties temporarily when the Secretary started on his ill-fated journey, will likely succeed as head of War Office.

Fierce Fighting Between Ypres and Hooge

The Greatest Since St. Julien

Not since St. Julien have the Canadians suffered so heavily as they did in the tremendous fighting between Ypres and Hooge on June 2nd, and 3rd. After being pushed back for 700 yards on a front of 3,000 yards, the Canadians by a heroic counter-attack with bombs and bayonet retook most of the ground lost. No less than 101 officers of all ranks figure in the first casualties received from the fighting on Monday. These include a major-general and a brigadier-general, four lieutenant-colonels, eight majors, 21 captains, and 66 lieutenants.

Buying on Time

It is our impression that a good many farmers—and other people, too, no doubt—get their cash and their credit wrong end to. They are careful about making a purchase for cash, but rather less careful about making one on credit; they would hesitate somewhat longer about buying the new implement if they were going to plunk down the money for it than if they were only going to sign a six-months note.

Of course it ought to be just the other way round. A man can afford to take more chances with his cash than with his credit. He ought to be more wary about making a given purchase when he cannot pay for it but must give a note than if he had the money in the bank. If a man loses a hundred dollars in cash through an unprofitable purchase he has lost a hundred dollars, and that is the end of it. If he signs a note and cannot pay it, he stands to lose finally not only the money but his credit.

Obviously a man can afford to take chances in proportion to the width of his margin over and above necessities. If he makes a questionable purchase on credit he is gambling below the margin. This will look pretty self evident, we think, to anybody who studies it over.—S.E.P.

Can Britain Stay Financial Course?

If the war lasts until 1918, as Lloyd George remarked the other day in a public speech, Britain can still pay for it. There appears to have been much dissent to this view in England. It is pointed out that Britain is not merely looking after her own expenditure but financing that of most of the allies and small nations as well. Even France, wealthy as she is, we have to supply with leather, steel, coal and iron. In addition, to pay for the immense burdens that are immediately payable, an army of industrial workers has to be kept going in the United Kingdom to look after export train. The question is, can the strain be endured, if need be, for another two years? Some of the big men over in England think it cannot. A majority hold the other view. It probably can, if industries vital to the needs of the nation are nationalized for the period of the war. As probably it cannot, if the wasteful methods of private profiteering are allowed to continue. But we have seen already with what speed the British Government can make an end of these conditions when the need for such action is indubitably shown.

During our visit to the "Hat" we saw a number of the Oyen boys, who all wished to be remembered to their friends here. The 17th. Bat'n left Medicine Hat for Sarcee Camp, Calgary on Tuesday night.

"Doc" tells a good joke on himself during his recent visit to Calgary. He registered his name with the customary M.D. tacked on. The hotel clerk thought the "M.D." was "and wife", and wanted to charge "Doc" double rate. Never mind "Doc", nearly all famous men are notorious for their poor writing.

Visitors to Medicine Hat, should stay at the Hotel Cecil; "A Hotel that is next to home." Up-to-date, good service, comfortable and home like. The "Hat" people should be proud of their Hotel Cecil.

FIERCE FIGHTING BETWEEN YPRES AND HOOGUE

No account has yet been received of the casualties among the rank and file, which must, of necessity, be heavy. It is stated that from 200 to 600 prisoners were taken.

While it is not permissible to mention the names of battalions engaged, no less than 14 different units are represented in the list, in addition to headquarters. One Toronto battalion has the heaviest list, namely, 19 all of whom are missing. A Montreal battalion comes next with 18, a Sherbrooke regiment is next with 15 casualties, a Toronto battalion which was with the first contingent has 15 a Victoria regiment comes next with nine, a Brandon regiment has eight, brigade headquarters lost 4, while one of Canada's first regiments lost 4.

 $12.00—This stays in the Ford owner's pocket book.

Other Ford spare parts are just as low priced in proportion—the 26 most called for parts altogether cost only $8.04.
 And less than a dollar a year as a total expense for spare parts is not at all an uncommon experience of Ford owners.
